

Looking Ahead

Weekly Report 25

3/18 - 3/24

During this past week my primary focus was planning out the process that would need to be followed by me to create my final product and researching more about the requirements of a partner at a consulting firm.

My final requires me to find small business owners that would be willing to talk to me about their business model and finances to allow me to determine the best strategic financial plan to assist them. This will require me to find at least five small business owners and then choose one that would be a good fit for my talents. Next, my process would require me to discuss creating a financial plan with my mentor and using any tips to tweak my final product.

My research on the job description of a partner is relevant to my final product because my final product entails that I create a strategic plan that can have large impacts on a company with high stakes. My requirements for becoming a partner will be very important as well such as vast expertise, a history of successful handling of high profile projects, good client relations, and great internal relationships which are all aspects that will need to be utilized by me for my final product.
