

Self Check

Weekly Report 29

4/15 - 4/21

During this past week, my main focus was on planning my schedule and the necessary tasks required to complete my final product. Along with that, my work this week also included polishing my portfolios and resume.

Although my calendar for my final product was well planned, it has not been reflecting my progress on my final product due to setbacks such as struggling to meet with small business owners which is pivotal in creating my final product. However, with proper reassessment, my new schedule includes a shortened time to meet with professional and a much larger amount of time dedicated to self-led research and production of my final product. So far, the majority of my hours spent on my final product have been dedicated to research, but my goal in the next two weeks is to meet with small business owners and gather as much information as I possibly can.

My portfolios are key to my success in ISM because they are a place where my entire progress and research in ISM can be on display and easily accessed. Therefore, the past week has included me updating my portfolios and ensuring that they are a proper representation of the effort and time that has been placed in ISM by me.
